Q: Physics projectile motion equation and Chebyshev T-F inequality I am trying to solve the projectile problem using the equation  $a(\cos\theta*\omega) = g(t)$ . My question is why do we use  $\theta = \cos^{-1}(1/2)$  instead of  $\theta = \arcsin(1/2)$ ? I know that  $\cos^{-1}(1/2) \geq \frac{\pi}{4}$  using Chebyshev's inequality. I have recently been introduced to the concept of a 'fundamental diagram' (or frontier diagram) and Chebyshev's Inequality. A standard fundamental diagram is of the form  $y = a*x + b$ . I know that in order for the interval to remain bounded, the slope of the curve must be less than 1. But what does this have to do with the projectile problem and Chebyshev's inequality? I have seen that  $y = m*x + k$ , where m is the slope of the curve and k is the y-intercept of the curve. The Chebyshev inequality in that context is  $P(a$
