A federal court has canceled the registration of a Republican organization, saying it violates federal law. The decision throws the party's convention plans into doubt. But the decision comes with the caveat that it may not effectively block the party's efforts to secure convention delegates. On Aug. 18, the Republican Party of North Carolina notified the State Board of Elections that the Young Republicans Committee registered as a political committee on July 20, and filed a campaign finance report on July 30. The State Board of Elections told The Greenville News that it would review the party's request, but noted that its registered status does not automatically mean that it is eligible to have financial contributions legally made to it. According to an Aug. 28 order from the federal court, the State Board of Elections learned on Aug. 6 that the Young Republicans Committee had indeed registered as a political committee, and within ten business days after that it then filed the report for fundraising in the first quarter of 2017. "The N.C. Republican Party had not been aware of the YRNC's registration status and had mistakenly thought the registration was properly issued and in place," Judge Jane E. Braxton wrote in her order. Read: N.C. GOP loses one lawsuit in its attempt to block Hillary Clinton from challenging Pat McCrory at the ballot box Federal law prohibits a political party from receiving contributions or making expenditures in connection with a convention that doesn't occur within one year of the preceding election. The law was passed after a 1968 convention was held by the Democratic Party, which left a convention fund due to poor fundraising. That fund went unpaid because of changes in federal campaign finance rules. The Trump campaign, and the Trump family, are set to take the lead in the effort to gather convention delegates. They will be relying on grassroots supporters. The ruling comes only after two lawsuits have been filed by the Greenville-based Committee of Seventy, headed by Cary attorney Ed Enoch. One was filed as a challenge to the North Carolina GOP's use of a mail-only primary. The other was filed in September as a challenge to the registration and filing of the Young Republican Committee. In the second lawsuit, filed in Wake County Superior Court, Enoch
