I've submitted my logo design to my client in black, and white, and I'd like to save myself the trouble of doing a colour version. The thing is, the black and white version I've created has a colour-shift on it, so if I submit the logo to my client, it would look different. Is there a way to just make this logo so I don't have to get the client to change their version of it to make it match the colours in the logo? I'm not that familiar with how all this works and couldn't find anything that would help me. A: If you have a designer, they may be able to create a logo in multiple versions - black and white (as you've done) and in colour. If not, you could go one step further and print a version on coloured paper, or even colour copy the logo on coloured paper and scan it for use as the colour version. The key here is to try to prevent the customer from being able to tell which version they're looking at. KEYMACRO is designed to provide a rich environment for users to make use of macros. Through this program you can save any number of macro commands and also easily playback or edit them later. You can save as many commands as you'd like and even add edit and playback functions as well. Titanium Macro Manager has a simple and user-friendly interface. With this program you can record a macro while working in the various programs available through the program. Recording is done through two different methods. One is by using the keyboard, while the other is by using the buttons on the mouse. In the first method, you can simply define key combinations and record any action performed with that combination. The program can even be used to determine the next action that should be performed when an action is recorded, so you can do much more than just recording a key combination. In the second method, you can use various buttons on the mouse and record any action performed with those buttons. You can also define which combination should be recorded, the buttons used to define this, and also which buttons to use for playback. As it comes with a suite of tools and features, Titanium Macro Manager is a complete package. KEYMACRO Features: Add as many macro commands as you'd like to use. Define your macro commands in one of three different ways: Macro Key, Keyboard, and Mouse Record your macro commands to a file that you can play back or edit at a later time. SpeedAutoClicker can be accessed from the Chrome Web Store or at the Google Play Store. There is no need for the use of any extra software or plugins. It can be downloaded and installed for free. It will work on both Android and iOS. Essential Features: Works as a plug-in for Chrome and Mozilla Firefox Click Options Adds mouse click to the browsers Automatically makes clicks at the given intervals and at certain clicks Get notifications when a click is made Option to switch between fast and slow click options Auto-detects the browser Preferences, slow and fast button clicks Select the button you want to click with Select the mouse click type you prefer (left or right click) Anti-detection settings Highlight the button or link you want to click Select the interval Select the click limit Select a sound if you want to Change the sounds in the options Adjust the position where the clicks will be triggered Place the script in the URL bar and click on the link If you're using the Chrome extension, it will work on both Android and iOS Can be downloaded and installed for free Please follow us on Facebook and Twitter to receive all the latest news and information on this application. SpeedAutoClicker Pros: Great interface and a clean experience Well-constructed and functional program Works with almost all browsers SpeedAutoClicker Cons: Doesn't work well if you don't have an account You may need to do some testing to get this to work It may not work with specific websites Final Verdict: This application has multiple variations that allow for a variety of uses. Some people like it for its speed, while others prefer that clicking be slow. There is also an added feature that allows you to create a special button that will initiate the auto-clicking function. Rant A lot of people will balk at this program, thinking it's a scam. I'm not suggesting that it is one. But if you go to the Chrome Web Store, you will notice that there are a few more applications that are about the same thing as this one. So, if you choose to download it, don't be surprised if it doesn't work. This is very similar to the ClickBot application. But it has multiple functions to allow for a great variety of uses, meaning you won't have to try it out and find out it doesn't work. Other people may be turned
